Why do you believe publishing is important,
personally and professionally?

Session Objectives:

Attendees will:

1. Learn about the experiences of the professionals that have engaged in the publication process;
2. Learn tips and tools to aid in conducting research and writing for publication, and;
3. Identify action items to begin exploring research and publication opportunities.

Discussion Questions

1. What is a scholar practitioner or practitioner scholar?
2. What are scholar practitioner publishing outlets?
3. What opportunities exist for collaborations with HE faculty/grant opportunities through national/regional associations?
4. How to get started with publishing/research?

Rapid Response Questions

1. What tips/tricks did you use to start formulating ideas?
2. How do you go about gathering data at an institution for research/publication?
3. How have you utilized your networks in this process?
4. Are you allowed to use data that you collect through your professional position?

Final Thoughts

- Find writing partners and mentors
- Schedule time to write
- Find ways to transition existing practices to publishing opportunities
- Decide on research interests if you are unable to identify specific research questions.
- Connect with faculty who share your research interest or passion
